
Next Generation EU-Research Series

Call for Speakers / Papers

The Jean Monnet Chair on Interactive Multi-level Democracy in Europe (IMUDE) at the Otto-von-Guericke University proposes a new format to engage with upcoming research in EU studies. We are looking for PhDs and Postdocs in political science or closely related fields who focus on the European Union's polity, politics and policies in order to present cutting-edge EU research in a virtual lecture series, followed by an author workshop in Magdeburg with all lecturers of the series.

The lecture series Next Generation EU-Research Series: New Insights into the Polity, Politics and Policies of the European Union thus aims to share innovative, current research in European studies. We invite applications from PhD students and Postdocs who are advanced enough to present their findings. The lecture series is to offer a platform for you to present your work and connect with peers – and to offer these insights to a wider audience.

The lecture will be held online between October 2023 and January 2024. The author workshop in Magdeburg is planned for early March 2024.
Deadline for proposals: 1 June 2023.

What do we offer?

- Opportunity to present your research and lead a discussion on your topic with an audience of students enrolled in European Studies as well as a wider interested public
- Participation in an author workshop in Magdeburg to follow up on the lecture series
- The joint development of an edited volume or special issue (depending on fit of applications and lecturers)

What are we looking for?

- Innovative research on the European Union in political science and closely related fields
- Project proposals that focus on research results (no PhD outlines or intentions about future work)
- Engagement in the lecture series as speaker and participant for your peers, as well as author in an edited publication
